

Electronic registers

Accelerate procedures with judiciary registers and web portals

Concept and consulting

Faster, more efficient, more secure: central registers make work substantially easier for legal advisors and courts alike. That applies at a national, but even more at an international level. Besides the establishment of nationwide registers, judiciary bodies are therefore working intensively on the integration of national judiciary registers via web portals throughout Europe.

In order to accomplish this type of complex task promptly and reliably, you need partners with the appropriate background of experience. Westernacher Products & Services is familiar with the demands and processes of the judiciary and has achieved successful pioneer work with the establishment of the Central Procurement Register and the Register of Protective Bills.

The fast and slim way to the electronic register and web portal

Our service package at a glance

Conceptual consulting and moderation

Integrating all those involved, we work out a detailed implementation concept on the basis of our broad experience from the linking of content by portal technology and the coupling of registers and electronic legal data exchange.

Technical design

We conceive your solution in consideration of aspects such as existing infrastructure, data security and data protection, access rights and authentication as well as clearing methods and required performance.

Project management and operation

We navigate the total project to success and supervise operation in the long-term.

Project successes in practice

Together with the European Academy of Law and Computing, Westernacher put the Central Register of Protective Bills www.schutzschriftenregister.de online in the shortest possible time. It will shortly be available to lawyers and courts. Its main advantages are simple operation, a high level of comfort, such as the paperless invoice with electronic signature and many other handling advantages.
